Mr. Hitchcock cannot clear his record in the Bartley deal by calling Edgar Howard a poker player and a black-mailer. What the people demand of Hitchcock is genuine evidence that he was not in on the Bartley shortage. Nothing less than such proof, Mr. Hitchcock, will satisfy the people.

The missing balloon America has been heard from and the aeronauts are safe. This balloon started from St. Louis October 17th with nine other contestants in an international contest, and landed on the 19th in the wilds of Quebec after a sustained flight of 1,850 miles. This establishes a new world's record.

Chairman Davis, of the republican county central committee, is in receipt of a telegram announcing that Grant Martin, republican candidate for attorney general, will be here to speak at the republican rally at the Lloyd opera house on Wednesday evening of next week. Mr. Martin is a forceful talker, and with the address by Mr. Aldrich the audience is certain to hear good things politically.

Never were railroad revenues so great or railroad orders for equipment so small as they are today, says the New York Journal of Commerce. Nor is there any prospect of an increase in the volume of railroad buying of steel during the balance of the current month. The steel mills, however, have reason to believe that after the November election and a settlement of the rate question larger orders will come from railroads for rails, bridges, machinery and other equipment.

A South Omaha market paper prints the following: "A number of farmers from the different parts of the state who were visiting in the lobby today are one in the assertion that mature hogs have never been so scarce as they are at present. The dragnet of high prices has been effectual and few old hogs are left. A 278-pound average during September and relatively heavy weights at other points tell of old-sow liquidation that is borne out by market offerings."

Suit has been brought in district court by the Kearney Water & Electric Power company against the power companies of Gothenburg, Lexington and Cosad to secure an injunction enjoining the said companies from using water from the Platte river for irrigation purposes. For several months the Kearney company has been unable to secure water for power purposes, due, the plaintiff claims, to the fact that the water is taken from the river at Gothenburg, Lexington and Cosad.

John Christopherson, the young drug clerk of Calloway, who was charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Mrs. D. E. Moses of that place several weeks ago, was discharged from custody in county court by Judge Holcomb. In passing on the case the judge said he was convinced the affair was a most deplorable accident and that the defendant had no criminal intent when he sold the drug. The preliminary hearing lasted two days and attracted much attention.

The promoters of the oil well which during the summer has been drilled in the northern limits of Shelton are elated over the prospects for it seems reasonably certain that before the well goes down much further oil will have been struck. Every indication of oil has made its appearance. The dirt that is now thrown out is tainted with crude oil and when thrown into the river a coat of oil immediately forms on the surface of the water. This leads the engineer in charge to state his positive conclusion that before many days go by he will have found oil. The well is now down six hundred feet.

The socialists of North Platte will have a rally at the court house Friday evening, Nov. 4th, at 8 p. m. Fred J. Warren will occupy the platform as speaker, and explain the genuine issues of the day from a workingman's standpoint. Mr. Warren is a logical and interesting speaker and has few equals, if any, on the platform today. Come out and hear him, as this will be an intellectual treat you cannot afford to miss.

Remember the date Friday evening, November 4th, at 8 p. m., at the court house. Ladies especially invited.

Representative Bushee's Legislative Record Good.

Berton K. Bushee's record as representative to the last session of the Nebraska legislature is replete with the quality and quantity of work accomplished. Coming as he does from the very western district of the state and being new to the work the good work he accomplished goes far toward showing that he has both stitokitiveness and force of character. He is one of those men who, starting with nothing, has fought upward through the various vicissitudes of life until he is counted as a successful man in business and a successful man always makes the best material for offices of public trust.

His legislative record shows that he introduced the bill appropriating $75,000 for the aid of weak school districts in Western Nebraska, thus enabling many districts to hold six or eight months of school where only four or five were possible before. The benefits of this law can hardly be estimated.

He also introduced the bill locating another experimental station in this part of the state and the station is now in operation in Scottsbluff county.

He was one of a very few who secured $25,000 to pay off the old wolf bounty claims and it was a hard fight to get even that.

He introduced and secured the passage of four good irrigation bills badly needed in the district.

He did not miss recording his vote on a single bill during the entire session and the record shows that the best of judgment was used in his voting.

The record stands out clearly and clean, though it was largely a democratic legislature Mr. Bushee, by his effective methods secured more for Western Nebraska than has any representative secured before him.

Among the important things to be accomplished in the next session is the re-apportionment of the state into legislative districts. Western Nebraska should have a larger representation and there will be a hard fight to get it. Mr. Bushee has had the experience now and is the only logical man to send to Lincoln from this district. He has shown his ability to cope against heavy odds and will be found on the firing line faithfully representing his constituency. He should be returned.—From Kimball Observer of Oct. 20, 1910.

Keep it Before the People.

Keep it before the people that: On January 8, 1893, Joseph S. Bartley, elected as a republican, became state treasurer of Nebraska; that

On December 28, 1893, G. M. Hitchcock, editor and publisher of the World-Herald, borrowed $3,000 from State Treasurer Bartley; that

On September 25, 1895, the note representing the $3,000 of stolen state money was renewed by Hitchcock and covered up in the name of the same banker, but endorsed over to Bartley; that

Not until September 25, 1895, was a second mortgage for $3,000 recorded as pretended security for the loan; that In January, 1897, Bartley proved to be a defaulter for over $5000,000, of which the $3,000 loaned to Hitchcock was a part; that

On September 14, 1901, when the property went to foreclosure Bartley was still in prison; that

On October 1, 1901, when the note outlawed Bartley was in the penitentiary serving sentence for embezzling the money which Hitchcock enjoyed; that

In 1904 when pressed to pay up Hitchcock repudiated all obligation for the $3,000, setting up the statute of limitation; that

To this day neither Bartley nor the state has ever been reimbursed the $3,000, of which Mr. Hitchcock is still the beneficiary.—Omaha Bee.

A Runaway Stagecoach By WALTON WILLIAMS Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"The stagecoach of the past," said one of a party discussing the comparative dangers of different methods of travel, "had its advantages. True, a reckless driver would once in awhile swing round a sharp curve on a mountain side and spill a load of passengers down a precipice a few thousand feet, but such occurrences were rare. I remember one close call I had out in Colorado half a century ago when I was a youngster that I wouldn't like to go through again. If an accident of equal importance should happen to a railroad train, even on comparatively level ground, it would be awful.

"On the particular occasion I'm going to tell you about we started from Georgetown, in the mountains, to go down to Denver. There's a loop railroad at Georgetown now, but at that time there was nothing but a turnpike. A green hand at driving, an Irishman, Mike Rourke, from the stables, had been put on the box, the regular driver, Dan Patterson, having been laid off for illness. Patterson was inside the coach, going down to Golden City, where he lived.

"It was a fine day, and we were regaled with many extensive views of the plains at the foot of the range, appearing for all the world like an ocean. Indeed, geologists say that it was once an ocean bottom. From the brow of an eminence where we were admiring one of these views we could see the road before us winding down a steep incline and at the bottom rising a shorter distance to another summit. A few moments after we started down we noticed that instead of going slow, as was necessary for safety on such inclines, we seemed to start off with a quickening pace and were soon rolling downward at a furious speed. Patterson thrust his head out of the window and drew it in again, white as a cloth.

"What is it? we all asked breathlessly. "Don't know, but we're all likely to be dashed to pieces."

"Coming from a trained stage driver, this set us all wild. Some of the women grasped frantically at the doors, but two of us men, one on each side, knowing that to jump would be certain death and remaining inside might mean life, held the doors shut. But the inside of that stagecoach was the wildest scene I ever witnessed—women shrieking and men (some of them trying to reassure them, while others were holding on to something as if in that way they could hold the coach back.

"But looking outside was worse than the inside. The few scrub trees there were beside the road shot by like arrows. The coach swayed, and as every curve in the road we felt sure it would upset, and sometimes an upset meant a spill over the side of a precipice. We kept hoping that there would be some slackening of speed, but instead of slackening the pace was continually growing faster, and the quicker the pace the more the coach reeled.

"By this time the babel among the passengers was deafening. Some were praying, while others were shouting at us two men who kept a strong grip at the doors to let them out. One big strong man, maddened by terror, hammered me unmercifully to make me open the door. But I held on with a death grip. I think that having something to do helped me to retain my own equanimity. If anything more was needed it was supplied by the sight of men crazed by fear ready to do any foolish or selfish act. Passing a house beside the road. I saw a man standing in the door looking at the coach with his eyes and mouth wide open. But I saw him only a moment, for he flew by like a cannon ball.

"Then the swaying of the coach grew less and the terrible speed at which we were going seemed to be lessening. I put my head out the window and, looking forward, saw that we were near the bottom of the incline and in a few moments would be rolling along a comparatively straight ascent. The sudden transition from almost certain death to sure safety produced a very singular effect on me. The blows of the big man who had tried to force me to open the door had produced no effect on me of any kind. Relieved from the strain, my first act was to stretch my arm and plant my fist against his eye and knock him sprawling on the seat behind him. Then I cried: "Hurrah! We're safe!"

"From this moment our pace slackened, but we went far up the hill before it was reduced to anything like a quiet run. The coach was a long while coming to a full stop, seemingly as though it must do so of its own weight. When it did we all tumbled out. The driver, too, came down from the box and stood at the head of his trembling leaders.

"What was it? we all cried in a breath. "It was that," replied Mike, pointing to the tongue that lay on the ground at the heels of the wheelers. Patterson, who in addition to being ill had been on a terrible strain, saw it and, realizing what we had escaped, had to hold on to a wheel to avoid dropping down. I went up to Mike and asked him what measures he had taken with the horses after the tongue dropped.

"I licked 'em all the way down, son," he said.
